What you need to do next

We need you to give us some information about Gordon Hunter. This will help us understand when to expect payments from you.

Email us at: 2012scheme.employerservice@dwp.gov.uk using your Employer Reference Number as the email subject.

Include in your email:

- the words 'new deduction'
- your employee's payroll frequency
- the first payroll date you can make the deduction
- how many days' notice you would need to make a deduction

Protected earnings

Your employee has 60% of their net earnings protected from each deduction you make. This means that after you have deducted child maintenance from their net earnings they must have at least 60% left to cover their own living costs.

Where your employee has not received sufficient earnings in any given pay period to enable the full amount of child maintenance to be deducted, i.e. where the amount of maintenance to be deducted exceeds 40% of net earnings, you should always deduct up to 40% of net earnings in these circumstances.

It may be that, over a certain period, your employee does not have enough earnings to pay the full amount, for example in the case of sickness. In this case, you must simply carry forward the shortfall and add it to your next payment, but it should not exceed 40%. You must continue doing this until the shortfall has been fully paid.

Complying with this order is a legal requirement

Payments should be sent to us straight after the deduction has been made and must reach us no later than the 19th day of the month after you make the deduction.

You, the employer, must apply the provisions of Part 3 of the Child Support (Collection and Enforcement) Regulations 1992 in England, Wales and Scotland; or Part 3 of the Child Support (Collection and Enforcement) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1992 in Northern Ireland.

Failure to do so could lead to prosecution under section 32(8) of the Child Support Act 1991 in England, Wales and Scotland; or Article 32(8) of the Child Support (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 in Northern Ireland.
